Sábanas de algodón egipcio, plumones de ganso, secadores eléctricos de toallas, televisión plana, wifi gratis y la posibilidad de disfrutar de una noche romántica en un alojamiento que solo reúne un máximo de ocho huéspedes son algunas de las comodidades que ofrece el hotelito con encanto La Joya, en el Valle de Ricote.

El complejo está situado en una finca de más de 200.000 m² de limoneros y naranjos. De hecho, una de las actividades que organiza la hostería es la de un recorrido por el centro de los 8.000 árboles en un intento de acercar la agricultura y diferentes especies casi extinguidas de la zona a los visitantes, quienes catan y matizan a la vez que tienen un encuentro directo con el terruño.

La Joya dispone de tres espacios bien diferenciados: dos suites para dos personas denominadas El Cactus y La Palmera; decoración clásica de hotel colonial, la primera, y tintes modernos de loft neoyorkino, la segunda. A éstas se suma la 'Haymah' de Ibn Arabi, dispuesta para cuatro personas y más cercano al nuevo concepto europeo 'Glamping', que viene a ser el término medio entre el glamour y el camping.

Cada estancia dispone de su propia terraza y el servicio de desayunos, que siempre está incluido, se sirve en este espacio al aire libre. La estancia mínima para dos personas es de dos noches -250 euros-, aunque existe la posibilidad de reservar La Noche Mágica, compuesta de una cena romántica con velas, una botella de cava y el desayuno de la mañana siguiente, además de la estancia en una de las dos suites -todo por 200 euros-. Para no romper la magia de la velada, el servicio de la cena se presenta de una vez todo emplazado y es la pareja la que marca sus ritmos como si estuviese en casa, pero cambiando el bote de Dalsy, la música de la videoconsola y los avisos de que ha terminado el ciclo de la lavadora como telón de fondo por velas, aromas a azahar y burbujas en altas copas de cristal. ¿Apetece?

II INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS “DESCENDANTS OF ANDALUSIAN MOORISH IN WESTERN MEDITERRANEAN”

The Andalusians "Moorish" , Mudéjar Moorish, people from Granada, old, or just the Moorish as they are called in official documents and literature of that time, are the basis of a growing number of research papers dedicated to shed light on this long and important period, which avatars marked certainly the history of the countries of Southern Europe and North Africa.

Microhistory studies of the towns and localities with presence of Moorish communities have proliferated in recent years and they are a step closer to understand the similarities and differences among regional groups, social classes and individuals, often subsumed under the generic "name of Moorishs".

But where research become complicated, it is precisely at the time of the expulsion of 1609/1614. It is at this critical time when the monarchy of Felipe III forced into exile and deportation to such a significant mass of population, when the multiplicity of situations, cases and uncertainties appear. These circumstances make us question critically sometimes the data provided by the agents of the expulsion and the chroniclers of the period concerned.

The fate of the expelled, or those who eluded expulsion, itineraries and ways and places of their settlements in the new host countries, the identity continuity of their descendants in both shores of the Mediterranean, all these facts continue to open new doors to researchers in a task that will certainly give new prospects in the coming years.

Atendiendo a estas tareas investigadoras, Ojós y el Valle de Ricote, pero no sólo ellos, son un excelente marco geográfico y humano donde llevar a cabo este II Congreso.

They addressing these research tasks, eyes and the Valley of Ricote, but not only them, are an excellent geographical and human framework that perform this II Congress.

Barometer of RURAL TOURISM in Spain

Conclusions

Among the ingredients tested about rural supply and demand in Spain (Rural Tourism Barometer Spain-March 2015), interesting conclusions can be drawn:

- In summer, destinations with more supply and demand were Castilla y Leon, Catalonia, Andalusia and Asturias and in October, November and December, the first three regions bring together most of the range of establishments (47%) and also favorite offers of the rural traveler (47.6% of reserves) to spend the autumn.
- It is to be underlined particularly in this quarter, the increase of 200% in visits to La Rioja, which demonstrates the special interest of the rural traveler on this earth at its peak scenically speaking, when it is time to harvest and the expanding range of activities linked with wine and tourism.
- As for accommodations, renting cottages remain the protagonists of the supply and demand of rural tourism in our country.
- The sector has affordable prices, since 70.3% of establishments have prices that are between 15 and 30 euros per person and night.
- The feedback from travelers are pretty good, being Cantabria the region with the highest rated accommodation. In these data it is very positively highlighted the treatment received, one of the greatest values of rural tourism.
- During the fourth quarter it is still a very strong seasonality, and that trips keep concéntrate on weekends, long weekends and holiday periods, such as the Constitution weekend or the New Year's Eve weekend. In order to encourage greater employment at other times, a couple of tips: go to the gray and speak foreign languages to reach foreign public and the elderly.
- Services for those traveling with children remain a constant demand of the rural community, although it is not the most offered service by rural Spanish accommodations. In most cases, there are fireplace, barbecue and garden.
- Do not forget the phone: it keeps growing the search of rural accommodation through mobile devices (phones and tablets), so we should not let time to get adapted to technological and connected traveler.
